August 2010

Published 15 September 2010

Life is so busy we are getting very behind on the ol' news, so what's occurrin as they say, well, Gareth joined us in August and has adapted well to TCRM, his other half is feeding us with biscuits and cakes on a regular basis even though I am suspicious she is trying to ruin my diet. One of the roles he has adopted is to blog, so the TCRM blogspot is full of the inner most working of a web design company. Read Gareth blogging away here.We've had a quiet few weeks on launching new sites but we have launched the new ecommerce site for ETA Supplies. They sell all you need to become an Elvis tribute artist (ETA), Elvis Jumpsuits, guitars, satin scarves all from http://www.etasupplies.co.uk/However this week should see the launch of four new sites, if Gareth keeps the biscuits coming.Have a great month (or six weeks)

So what set of programmer are you? Do yoe of there with your pad of paper working through the logical process of the website drawing arrows, boxes and these fittle amotations with curving little ponters all over the place? Or an yoe from the ough olde of the genery tracks? Do you play it fast and loose by bitting the code first and hacking away entil you get screeting that works?	View my complete profile

I belong to the former category. The idealist programmer. This to think and plan through every aspect of the state below even theiring about producing one live of code. I live the boxes with servery painting to that hereos, bain of functions or stated by category, and regity.	viti daugie žideni Convect
