

May 2011

Published 14 June 2011

It's nearly time for the annual hols and it started me thinking again. I suppose my attitude to work is a touch obsessive and I can't really go on holiday and relax without being able to leap back into work from wherever I am in the world at a moments notice (rarely happens thankfully) . Of course I have an advantage in that technically my trusty laptop is configured to do everything but to be honest it's all involving rdp, vpn, adsl etc and many other acronyms but is not a simple solution to use and not really suitable for most. When we had an enquiry from an ex colleague about how he could "configure" his electronic life that he never missed an email, his diary was in "sync" and his contacts was always available and all this was available on his home computer, laptop and of course his faithful mobile without tedious updates. The end result was a solution that is somewhat "perfect". Gareth now has his digital life at his fingertips 24 by 7 and is so pleased he was kind enough to pen a testimonial. BTW Gareth is a facilities management guru , he can be contacted on gareth.andrews@mac1.co.uk. So if you need an elegant and problem free email system please contact us for more information. Have a great month

